CHATTANOOGA BOYS IN EIGHTY-SECOND DIVISION

HELPED TO WIPE ST. MIHIEL IN TWO DAYS.

Stanley Snyder Writes of Being in Thickest of Fight and Having Huns on the Run.

That the boys of the Eighty-second division played a glorious part in the great battle of Sept. 12 and 13, is disclosed in a copy of special general orders which were issued Sept. 18 by Brig. Gen. C. D. Rhodes, in sommand of the 157th field artillery brigade, a part of the division.

In the orders Gen. Rhodes refers to the "uncomplaining fortitude and happy eagerness with which the officers and men of the 319th, 320th and 321st field artillery, including the medical personnel, accepted the opportunity for dangerous service against an aggres-

When American troops, commanded by American generals and directed by American staffs, attacked on plans worked out by Americans, and in two days wiped out the entire St. Mihiel salient, boys of the Eighty-it cond division were with them. Many Chattanooga young men belong to this division, and no doubt many a one took vision, and no doubt many a one took part in this battle who hasn't written home about it yet, or has only referred to it in the vaguest way.

The general orders are signed by C. D. Rhodes, brigadier-general, N. A., commanding. They are directed to be read aloud to each organization at the first regular formation after receipt and are posted on each organization bulletin board. Copies were also sent to the commanding officers of all units and to all commissioned officers of the brigade.

Special mention is made of the 307th Special mention is made of the 307th Trench Mortar battery and the 307th Ammunition train "from the beginning of operations, worked night and day under fire from guns and aeroplanes, exposing themselves fearlessly, not only to death from enemy projectiles, but from the explosion of our own but from the explosion of our own munitions."

Glenn Ellis, familiarly known as "Chick" Ellis, formerly associated with the local Y. M. C. A. work, is with the sand division, 221st machine gun battalion, Company A. He was commissioned second leutenant after he went to France. His people have not heard from him for several weeks, but he had been at a school for machine gun practice just outside of Paris and upon leaving there was to take a trip to the front. So it is highly probable that he was in the engagement of Sept. 12 at St. Mihiel.

Waiter Heasty, of St. Elmo, a well-known musician, has been with the 325th infantry band, but the band members have been made stretcher bearers and first aid workers. He is with the 82nd division.

C. Stanley Snyder, second lieutenant, C. Stanley Snyder, first have been made stretcher bearers and first aid workers. He is with the S2nd division.

C. Stanley Snyder, second lieutenant, and his brother, Raymond S. Snyder, first lieutenant, are both now at the front on the firing line.

Their mother, Mrs. Annie Snyder, wears a service pin with four stars on it, given her by Capt. Snyder when she was in Washington recently to see him before he departed for Camp Lee.

C. Stanley Snyder writes to his mother of "being in the thickest of the fight," of "having the Huns on the run" and says he hasn't seen a newspaper in six months.

The following graphic description breathing of the spirit that impels "going over the top" is written by him to his mother. He was no doubt in the engagement at St. Mihlel:

"I know. I've felt it all slong—if only given a chance I would give a good account of myself. Well, that time came and I handled my men and myself wonderfully. Was highly complimented. Have the letter and am saving same. And all the time I was thinking of you. I fought like a demon because I knew you expected it of me and it's in my blood. Well, there is one thing I would not take a fortune for, and that is the training I've had at boxing. I only wish they had drafted me about eight months sooner than they did, so I could have had my eyes opened. I am at present temporarily in command of my company.

"Last week I was on the highest mountain in France and had a good look through my glasses at everything—also Germany. On this mountain is the ruins of an old castle, which has two large holes put in it in the war of 1870. On top of it is a statue of Joan of Arc. I would not take anything for the experience. It will only fit me better here and in business in after life. I would like to send you and Bill my German Luger' total with its affanced bullets, but am in business in after life. I would like to send you and Bill my 'German Luger' pistol with its soft-nosed bullets, but am afraid it would not reach you. Then, too, I hope I can give 'em some of their own medicine."

"I was troubled with asthma and it seemed like I would die, especially in cloudy weather," says Mrs. J. B. Stephens, who lives at 20 Green Street. Nashville, Tenn., in her recent statement. "When the air was heavy nothing seemed to do me any good.

"I was much concerned about myself and thought I wasn't going to get well. Medicines of different kinds had been tried, but if they did any good. I couldn't see it. But when I tried the wonderful Lung-Vita it was different. The very first dose helped me and now I am like a different woman. I am proud of the fact that I am able to give a statement that may prove helpful to some one else who is suffering in a like manner."

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

MISS PREWITT TAKES PLACE OF JOHN MARTIN.

Miss Clyde Farrior Heads Transit Department - Twenty. Five Women in This Bank.

The first woman banking teller in Chattanooga has made her appearance at window No. 3 in the First National bank. Depositors who were accustomed to handing big bank rolls through the window to John Martin, receiving teller, are now turning them over to Miss Estelle Prewitt, who waits on them in a courteous and business-like way.

Mr. Martin enlisted in the United States army recently and the bank officials counted themselves fortunate in having a young woman already in their employ capable of filling the place.

Miss Prewitt has been with this bank for the past two years, covering the entire time of her residence in Chattanooga. She came here from Danville, Ky. She is systematic, business-like, and is a typical twentieth century business woman, and says that she has become so familiar with her work that it is no trouble at all. In fact, this young woman handles slips of banking paper with as much ease as the average woman does a dainty plece of fancy work. She has been trained in business methods and unconsciously fitted for the place which consciously fitted for the place which she is so satisfactorily filling.

Another important position is filled by a Chattanooga girl in the First Na-tional. Miss Clyde Farrior is head of the transit department where she has working under her more than twelve young girls.

This bank alone has lost twenty-two men employes, all going into the ser-vice of the American army, and offi-cials expect that at least five more will cials expect that at least five more will be called shortly. However, Capt. C. A. Lyerly, president of the bank, says that everything moves along "just the same." Capt. Lyerly says that at present the bank has twenty-five women employes, who have been filling positions there since the war. He says they are very well pleased with them and that the officials are beginning to realize that the women will make just as good bankers as the men. make just as good bankers as the men.

The coming draft calls will not only affect the First National bank, but every other bank in Chattanoga, will every other bank in Chattanooga, will be crippled to a certain extent. A number of the older and most efficient paying and receiving tellers will go and take up the arms of their country. So already bank officials at the other banks in the city are making plans to fill these vacancies with the women.

Gradually the women in Chattanooga are taking up the work that has been done by the men, just as the women of England and France did when the men of these nations had to go to the front and fight. The women who are taking the places of the men back home have been referred to by well known writers as those holding the second line trenches back home.

HERB TEA FOR "FLU"

Negro Woman Believes In Using Old-

Negro Woman Believes in Using Old-Time Remedies.

"What are you taking to prevent having the "flu?" was asked of a negro washerwoman yesterday. "I takes tea," was the reply. "You white folks don't believe in teas, but that is all we colored folks take when we are sick." And she displayed a half bushel basket of herbs she had gathered on the hill-sides. Among them were fever-weetea, catnip, rabbit leaf, life everlasting, which she says smells very sweet, and mullen leaves, from which she makes a syrup, and boneset. The latter, she says makes a dark red tea. Quantities of this herb grow on the side of Mission ridge, where she lives, but if purchased at a local drug store in prepared boxes one pays a fair sum. She says she takes three or four of the different teas each night and in addition drinks hot water during the day. The woman said she resorted to old-time remedies, remembering how her mother gathered such herbs in olden times for remedies, remembering how her mothe remedies, remembering now her mother gathered such herbs in olden times for such ailments. She has furnished the herbs to her friends and neighbors and also many "white folks."

One of the young women, Miss Mable Carman, formerly a trained nurse, volunteered her services to nurse the employes and their families. The management agreed at once for her to the employes and their lamiles. The management agreed at once for her to leave her work and also told her she would not lose her salary.

Since Miss Carman has been doing this noble work not a single employe has died and all patients are well on the work to research. the way to recovery.
